BREEDING PROGRESS IS FIRST IN IMPORTANCE

By J. W. MARCHBANK

Ultimately legislative action will be taken to reduce the commission on the pari mutuel pools of the race tracks in the state. Just at present on account of the pressing need of the state for revenue to cover the essential functions of government and also because the racing itself is only in a formative stage, it would be the part of wisdom not to make radical changes in the statute governing the sport.

In two years, when conditions promise to be much more stable, a change in the amount of the "take" at the tracks will be in order. That is a conclusion I have reached after careful consideration of the important matter from all angles. I am heartily in favor of a reduction at the proper time, but must state frankly I do not believe that time has arrived.

Right now every effort must be directed toward the building up of sportsmanship, as opposed to schemes of dividend-mad promoters. As I have pointed out in recent weeks in these columns, provision must be made for the maintenance of a high level in purses at the various courses, north and south, and the best way to guarantee the good purses is to limit the profits of racing organizations to a return of 10 per cent on the investment. Amortization, of course, will be taken care of in my suggestion.

Here is a pertinent paragraph in the articles of incorporation of the California Blood Horse Association, an organization of breeders of the state:

"That the purposes for which this corporation is formed are to promote, advance, encourage and foster the breeding and raising of thoroughbred horses in the state of California and elsewhere; to encourage and promote the welfare of persons, firms and corporations engaged in breeding and raising thoroughbred horses in the state and elsewhere; to encourage and foster the exhibition and showing of thoroughbred horses at horse shows, fairs and exhibitions; to establsih and maintain records and files of information concerning the breeding and raising of thoroughbred horses and to disseminate such information."

Which means, in a nutshell, there is plenty to do in the encouraging of the rearing of thoroughbreds at farms up and down the state, in order that horses of the highest caliber will be available for contests out on the oval.

FAVOR VOTE ON COUNTY CHARTER BY ELECTORATE

Query In Supervisors' Minds As To Whether Citizens Favor Its Retention

It developed at the regular meeting of the County Board of Supervisors, Monday, that at least three members—Witt, Poole and Francis—believe the matter of repeal of the present charter of the county should be submitted as early as feasible to a vote of the people for an expression of their choice as to its retentin. This became evident as a consequence of a recommendation to the board by District Attorney Ferrell that a committee be named to study the charter and suggest amendments if deemed advisable.

Members of the board expressed themselves as of the opinion that there was less confusion under the previous form of county government before adoption of the present charter. No definite action in regard to submitting the matter to a vote of the people was taken at Monday's session.

Supervisor Francis was in the chair at the regular session, following recovery from his collapse last week.

DRIVER NABBED AFTER NUMBER TWO HIT-RUN

Makes Second Strike And Then Police Catch Up With His Machine

E. G. Getz of 1338 Twenty-seventh avenue, San Francisco, while driving to his home last Sunday afternoon, on the 101 highway near Millbrae Highlands, was struck from behind and considerable damage was done to the rear of his automobile, by the machine of an unknown driver.

Getz pulled to the side of the highway, thinking the driver of the other car would stop, but instead the hit and run driver kept on going.

Getz secured the license number of the other machine, which was later broadcast over the San Francisco Police Radio.

The same individual was in another accident, a short time later, on the Skyline boulevard. A nearby rancher notified Deputy Sheriff George Krehl of the latter incident.

F. R. Buckle was arrested and held over night in the local jail on $500 bond, charged with being responsible for both accidents.

He appeared before Judge Wade H. Clay in the justice court at South San Francisco on Monday of this week.

Mrs. Pearl Jones, president of Woodrow Wilson-Vista Grande P. T. A., entertained the auditing committee of that association at her home on Vista Grande avenue, Monday afternoon.

PRESENT HIGH PRICE OF GOLD WILL STAY

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work

Confidence persists among well-informed minging people that the Federal Government will not recede from $35 an ounce gold and return to $20.67 gold and the so-called 100-cent dollar. If anything, apparently well qualified experts declare there will be an advance, rather than a recession, say to $41.31 an ounce.

I have word from Washington that a return to the old gold standard, in the event of a decision by the United States Supreme Court against the Government in the gold cases, is impossible without new legislation.

The question presents itself:

"What would Congress do if the Superme Court upset the present financial structure?"

The temper of the nation's law making body is inclined toward inflation, that is certain, so there is little likelihood of the docile acceptance by Congress of revaluation. Corrective legislation, possibly along the line of the taxation of profits accruing to holders of gold bonds if it was legally incumbent to pay them $1.69 on each dollar.

The Federal Government is making progress in the program for colonization in Alaska. Dr. Ernest Gruening, director of division of territories and island possessions of the Department of the Interior and chairman of the executive interdepartmental committee on Alaska, has notified Anthony Dimond, delegate in Congress from Alaska, to present data on the various possible locations in Alaska for colonization settlements.

The Federal Government plans moving from 100 to 200 families from the Middle West to Alaska in the coming spring. It has suggested, as stated heretofore in this column, that the fertile valley of the Matanuska, be selected for the first settlement.

Under tentative plans, we learn from the Alaska Weekly, each family would be provided with about 160 acres of land in the valley. Farm implements will also be furnished.

"Jack" Hammell, veteran mining man, made a timely suggestion in a recent address at Toronto. He called the attention of Prime Minister R. B. Bennett to the necessity of an early national survey of the mining resources of the Dominion of Canada. He said that any government that did not include the north in its national planning was unfit to govern.

"All our people appear to think Canada in terms of only two classes—the farmers and the factory workers, ignoring the real job of Canada on her northern frontiers," he said.

He maintained rightfully that he based his statments on the fact that the north with its gold mining industry was the stabilizer when economic storms were sweeping down on the national ship.

Timely information in regard to the mineral resources of Alaska was furnished last week to visitors by the West Coast Mineral Association, which held sessions at Seattle through the week to Saturday. In commenting on the lukewarm interest of many business men concerning mining, editor Earle Knight of the Alaska Weekly, said:

"Every institution in the city from the corner grocery to the banker is allied to mining directly and is dependent upon it to a degree which his activities in the industry's behalf would indicate him to be entirely ignorant of. The organization is attempting to foster the industry, which is the only salvation of Seattle and the nation, and it is doing it with the niggardly and grudging support of those who benefit most greatly from the effort."

Both "Jack" Hammell and Editor Knight are right. Prosperity of all the people depends primarily on mining.

MARCHBANK ASKS PERMIT TO BUILD SOUTHERN TRACK

Tanforan Owner In Alliance With Los Angeles Men For High Class Racing

J. W. Marchbank has announced application has been made to the California Horse Racing Board for permission to build a racing plant of the most modern type near the center of population in Los Angeles. The action was taken on behalf of a group of breeders of the blood horse and sportsmen of Southern California and for himself.

"I sent a check for $10,000 last Saturday to W. C. Buchanan, secretary of the Racing Board, accompanying my application for the construction permit," said the well-known sportsman. As soon as the permission is granted, which I anticipate will not take long, preliminary steps will be put forward expeditiously for the building of the race course."

A breeder of high class thoroughbreds himself and principal owner of the Tanforan plant, where the return of the sport to California was pioneered five years ago, Marchbank emphasized that the purpose of the establishment of the Los Angeles track is to encourage and foster the breeding and raising of thoroughbred horses in Southern California.

He pointed out that the cessation of racing in the sector to the south in 1909 cut short the plans of sportsmen to breed good horses. Every effort will be made to restore racing to its former position and the only way it can be done, the prominent breeder stated, was to do everything possible to advance the breeding industry.

Four or five sites are under consideration by the Marchbank organization for the proposed track. All

EXPOSITION TO HAVE STATE AND FEDERAL HELP

Bills Under Consideration At Both Capitals Are Expected To Assist

Participation by the United States government and the state of California in the California Pacific International Exposition is urged in special appropriation bills under consideration at Washington and Sacramento.

Press dispatches indicate there is little doubt both measures will be speedily passed.

Representative George Burnham introduced the bill in Congress which calls for $350,000 for a federal exhibit at the exposition opening in San Diego May 29. This measure contemplates the erection of a special building to house the great federal exhibit.

Senator Hiram Johnson will sponsor the bill in the Senate. President Roosevelt has heartily endorsed the international exposition and hopes to attend it this summer. G. Aubrey Davidson, chairman of the exposition board, appeared before the House committee on foreign relations and outlined the scope of the exposition and the imperative necessity for federal participation.

In the state Legislature, Senator Ed Fletcher is urging the finance committee to report favorably his bill calling for an appropriation of $200,000 for a state building and exhibit.

HOME LOSES ROOF IN MORNING BLAZE

Flames were discovered bursting from the home of Paul Turke of 670 Hanover street about 5 o'clock on Monday morning of this week.

The police department was notified shortly after that time by a neighbor of the conflagration, and the officer on duty in turn notified Fire Chief Andrew P. Chesney that there was a fire at Hanover and Acton streets.

The entire six companies of the Daly City Volunteer Fire Department responded and were on the scene in a short time. Engine Company No. 33 from San Francisco also arrived shortly thereafter. The fire was confined to the Turke residence, the roof of which was completely destroyed.

The origin of the blaze was not learned, but it is presumed to have been caused by defective wiring.

A great deal of time was lost by not pulling the nearest box at once.

In spite of adverse comments, the local department handled the fire in a very efficient and creditable manner and extinguished the blaze to the satisfaction of the officers of the department if not to that of the critics.

BUILDERS WANT CO-OPERATION IN BETTER HOUSING

Expect Annual Exposition To Stimulate Interest In Construction Plans

More than a score of conventions will mark San Francisco's annual Building Exposition, to be held in the Civic Auditorium, May 4 to 12, inclusive.

The big annual event is being arranged under the sponsorship of the San Francisco Builders Exchange as a stimulus to public interest in the program of the Federal Housing Administration.

Organizations of architects, engineers, contractors, apartment house and hotel owners and managers, auto camp and resort owners, home owners, garden associations and other similar groups are among those that will meet in convention in connection with the exposition.

The exposition itself will be in effect a revival of the old Mechanics Fair, which was a San Francisco institution of tremendous popularity prior to the disaster of 1906.

Frederick Weddleton, one of the best known exposition engineers on the Pacific Coast, has been retained as manager of the affair and has established offices and perfected a complete organization which is now engaged in the details preliminary to getting the affair underway.

W. H. George, president of the San Francisco Builders Exchange, heads the exposition committee of his organization and is taking an active part in the preparations for the event now under way.

"Prior to 1906," said Mr. George, "the Mechanics Fair ranked as San Francisco's most important annual event. It is the purpose of the San Francisco Builders Exchange to re-establish this time honored institution in the Building Exposition.

"The exposition will be wide in scope and will be representative of every product and service of the building trades. It is our purpose to make it even more comprehensive than was the Mechanics Fair."

Mr. George pointed out that the exposition has the unqualified endorsement of the Federal Housing Administration, which regards it as a timely aid twoard the administration's program of bringing the nation back to normalcy through the revival of the building industry.

Already there have been numerous applications for space reservation received at exposition headquarters, 344 Mission street.

PARENTS' NIGHT FOR BOY SCOUTS

Troop 148 of Daly City will meet Thursday evening, February 7, to award gold, silver and bronze medals to the scouts of this troop who have outstanding records for the past year. These boys have had a hard task, as they have had to accomplish a great deal of work in the merit badge field, in addition to having perfect attendance and promptness, and passing inspection at the weekly meetings. Judging by the work accomplished in the first month of this year, it will be a hard and fast race for the honors in the 1935 awards.

This troop has met all requirements in the past year to win the President Roosevelt award, which is given every year to scout troops. We are hoping that the award will be here for February 7.

The public and friends and families of the scouts are invited to attend the meeting on Thursday evening next from 8 to 9:15 o'clock, at the City Hall. Moving pictures will be an event of the evening.

Prior and leading up to the meeting on Thursday evening will be Open House at Troop 148's Den, at 231 Acton street, from Monday next to Thursday next, from 4 p. m. to 8:30 p. m. This is to be an opportunity for the public to see what the scouts have made, what their accomplishments are, and to see how he works in his "den." Movies will be shown each evening. Come and get acquainted! We want more scouts for Daly City.

FINE EFFECT IN TUNIC AND SKIRT

It's buttoned up the back like Mainbocher's Butcher Boy design, and it's shirred round the neck and the tops of the sleeves like Lanvin's peasant blouses. Make up the two in contrasting colors and fabrics, a green velvet skirt, perhaps, with a honey-colored satin blouse. Or, if you'd like a very dressy frock, choose a metal-flecked crepe for both blouse and skirt. Then top it all off with a high toque for an extra bit of glamor!

Pattern 9187 may be ordered only in sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 30, 32, 34, 36, 38 and 40. Size 16 requires 2⅞ yards 39-inch blouse fabric and 2⅛ yards skirt fabric.

SYNOPSIS

Theodore Gatlin adopts a baby, which he names "Penelope," in a final effort to solve his matrimonial troubles. But his wife has never wanted her, and their affairs end in the divorce court. Ten-year-old Penelope is given into the keeping of Mrs. Gatlin. At a baseball game a ball strikes Penelope on the nose. Mrs. Gatlin spirits the child to Europe. Gatlin retires from business, wills Penelope all his money, and is about to begin a search for his daughter when a motor accident ends his life. Some ten years later, in San Francisco, Stephen Burt, rising young psychiatrist, is presented by Dan McNamara, chief of police, with a new patient—Nance Belden, a girl with a dual personality, for which her "saddle nose" was in part responsible. McNamara does not think she is a criminal and obtains Burt's testimony in court. Lanny, the doctor's office nurse, is won over despite Nance's hard-boiled exterior. Nance's criminal record outweighs Doctor Burt's explanation of her case and she is sent to San Quentin penitentiary.

"You'll do," Nance declared, and held out her hand. Her cell proved to be exactly what the matron had said it was—a small, neat white room, with a neat little white bed and wash stand, and a small chest of drawers, not unlike that of a room in a hospital, save for the steel door with an orifice in the center of it, and connected by a locking mechanism with all the doors in that tier of cells so that the throwing of a lever locked them all simultaneously. Nance surveyed it with satisfaction. "This will do me nicely," she said. "Thank you ever so much, Matron."

She unpacked her suitcase, stowed her few belongings in the chest of drawers, removed her hat and sat down on the bed to read the printed list of prison rules. But one of the rules interested her. She discovered she could write letters once a month and receive visitors once a month—if she behaved herself. "I must be mother's little lamb," she decided. "This is some joint to get out of, but where there's a will there's a way." And she set herself resolutely to discovering the way.

Before locking-up time she thought she had discovered it. It was the fishermen in the cove just off San Quentin point who suggested it to her. In her stroll around the grounds she inspected the fence. It was sixteen feet high, of quarter-inch steel mesh, set on steel posts bedded in concrete, and it ran along a concrete base. A barefooted woman, using her toes to cling to the mesh, could climb the fence readily enough, were it not for an eighteen-inch topping of barbed wire, strung in strands four inches apart and set inward at an angle of forty-five degrees. One could not possibly surmount that. Nor could one burrow under the concrete base in daylight, even were the means available. Nor could one do it at night, because then one was locked in the cell. But one could stroll down the main walk to the sentry box just outside the entrance and appraise the situation there. As Nance suspected, the gate was kept locked and the guard had the key; indeed, the gate was never opened except to admit a new prisoner or an official, or to provide an exit for a discharged prisoner or official. However, Nance did not despair, for the gate was narrow—two feet—and there was no topping on it. She decided she would climb over it some day when the guard's back was turned; ergo, the thing to do was to induce the guard to turn his back!

For a month Nance gave her thoughts over entirely to this problem.

Lanny came into Doctor Burt's office and laid a letter on his desk. It was dated from San Quentin, on the cheap prison stationery and read:

"Dear Miss Lanning:

"I can receive visitors next Sunday. Won't you please come over and visit me? I'm so lonely, and you were so kind to me when I visited Doctor Burt's office. I have never forgotten you and never shall. Sincerely,

"Nance Belden,
"No. 43,231."

"Just think, Stevie," Lanny declared proudly. "She hasn't forgotten me, the poor dear."

"I suppose you'll go over."

"Indeed I shall. It would be terrible if I didn't. You'll send her something, won't you, Stevie? I think that might please her. I think she'd appreciate a portable phonograph and a couple of dozen records. I understand model prisoners are permitted such luxuries."

Stephen smiled. "Well, I'll stand for that expense, too, Lanny. And I shall await with interest the report you will have to make on your return." Lanny beamed.

The following Sunday afternoon, therefore, the matron admitted Lanny to the visitors' room and sent for Nance, who arrived on the run and cast herself joyously into Lanny's arms. Then Nance led the latter into a corner, and speaking swiftly and in a low voice, said:

"We aren't permitted to be alone with our visitors, Lanny. You'll notice the matron remains in the room. She won't listen to what we have to say but she keeps her eyes on us. Will you smuggle a letter out for me? I've got one all written, but the matron reads all our letters before posting them—and I can't have her read this one. It's to a very dear friend and I just couldn't bear to have her read it. Besides, if she read it, she wouldn't mail it."

Lanny's face grew grave. "Do you realize, my dear, what you are asking me to do?"

"Certainly, I wouldn't ask anybody but you to do it, Lanny dear. You're so understanding. If you can smuggle the letter out for me it will mean that within a month I'll be out, too. I'm sorry I cannot give you all my confidence, Lanny, but I just can't. You're the only woman on earth I'd trust, the only woman who has ever been kind to me. And oh, Lanny dear, I do appreciate your friendship so."

Lanny comforted the girl and considered her request. Considered it sympathetically, too, for at heart she was an outlaw herself. She knew Nance Belden did not belong here; that if the girl had had a fair chance, if she had not been the victim of a code of justice born of ignorance and lack of sympathy, she would be in a sanitarium instead.

"You can read the letter when you get home, Lanny," Nance pleaded, "and if you do not approve of it, you need not mail it. That's fair, isn't it?"

Lanny fell into the trap. "Yes, that's fair," she agreed, for she had unbounded confidence in her own judgment of what was right and what was wrong.

"You old sweetheart," Nance breathed, and kissed her—and at that moment a tall, handsome brunette who had repaid her lover's faithlessness by killing him, and who had been standing around in the hall near the entrance to the visitors' room, moved off down the corridor towards the recreation room. At once a shrill scream penetrated the visitor's room; then another and another—a woman cursed—and cried: "Stop them or they'll hurt each other."

The matron immediately left the visitors' room to quell the disturbance. Instantly Nance Belden drew a thick envelope from her bosom, unlocked Lanny's hand-bag and thrust the envelope in. She beamed proudly upon Lanny.

"I staged that ruckus," she confessed. "We have to play the game with each other here, you know—and two lifers obliged me. Good behavior doesn't mean time off for them, you know—and a hair-pulling match isn't taken too seriously here. Oh, by the way, what's your address—I mean your home address and telephone number?"

"It's in the telephone book," Lanny replied, and wondered why Nance had requested the information.

"Kiss me again, you dear thing," Nance commanded. Then she was out of the visitors' room, running for the scene of the excitement in the recreation room. She met the matron hurrying back to the visitors' room, after having quelled the fight by her mere appearance.

"You left me alone," Nance explained, "and that's against the rules. So I followed. I didn't want you to think I'd take advantage of you."

The matron smiled and pinched the girl's cheek. "You funny girl," she said. "You don't belong here and it's a shame you have to be here. You have a fine code of honor, Nance, even if they hang it on you for shoplifting."

She nodded to Lanny as the latter passed out of the building. The guard at the entrance took up her pass, looked her over with a pretense of suspicion, opened the gate and let her through. She climbed into her little car and had just started it when a good-looking but somewhat flashy young woman came to the side of the car and said:

"Are you driving to Greenbrae, madam?"

Lanny nodded. "I wonder if you'd give me a lift that far. The bus doesn't leave for an hour and I—"

"By all means," the generous Lanny agreed, and opened the door. The girl thanked her smilingly and climbed in. Half way down to Greenbrae, her guest said: "I think one of your rear tires is flat, madam."

"I was beginning to think so, too. It's bumpy, isn't it? Oh dear, I loathe changing a tire."

Lanny pulled up to the side of the road and got out, leaving her handbag beside her on the seat. Instantly her guest opened it, abstracted the letter Nance had given her and tucked it in her own hang-bag; then got out and with Lanny surveyed the flat rear tire.

"I'll help," she promised eagerly. "The least I can do to repay your hospitality."

Between them they shifted the wheels and resumed the journey. At Greenbrae the girl got out and thanked Lanny. No sooner had her little car disappeared behind a curve than the girl waved to a sedan parked in back of the little station and climbed in beside a young man who sat behind the wheel.

"Well?" he queried, apparently without interest.

"It worked," she replied. "Let's go."

CHAPTER IV

Arrived at the little bungalow she occupied in St. Francis Wood, Lanny put her car in the garage, entered her home, and sat down to read Nance Belden's letter. And when she failed to find it she did some of the logical thinking of which she was so eminently capable in situations where her emotions were not being preyed upon.

"Good work," she decided finally. "That girl I picked up on the road to Greenbrae stole it out of my hand-bag when I got out to look at the flat tire. She must have visited Nance before I got there. She was a flashy sort of damsel, too, now that I think of it. An underworld huzzy, doubtless; doubtless, too, known to the police. So Nance had no opportunity to slip her the letter. The matron watched too closely. Nance feared that would be the case, so she had an alternative plan. What a shrewd judge of human nature that girl is! She knew she could work on me, and oh, what a fool I was to permit it! Why, I'm as lawless as she is, only I'm a responsible member of society and she isn't. Nance knew I wouldn't fail to visit her; so she described me to her confederate, who spotted me when I drove up to the main gate and parked my car.

"When the confederate saw me coming back she drove a nail about an inch into my rear tire—simple as two and two are four. The nail was driven all the way in and the air was out before we'd gone a mile. Oh, dear, dear, dear, what a simpleton I am! I suppose I ought to do something about this, but then if I do, how can I explain my conduct to the prison officials?"

She realized thoroughly now the extent to which she had been an accessory before the act. What act, she wondered. Well, she would have to keep the details of this adventure to herself. Even Stephen Burt could not share her confidence in this, for Lanny was justly proud of her intelligence and integrity and loathed the thought that a suspicion of either might obtain in the mind of her beloved Stevie. She feared, should he learn of her adventure, that he would never quite trust her again. And that would be unbearable.

That sly minx—telling her she could read the letter before mailing it; that if she did not approve of its contents she was free to destroy it. That was the point upon which the susceptible Lanny had impaled herself.

"Well, it can't be anything so very important," she decided finally. "It couldn't be part of a plan to escape, because escape from that place is impossible. Besides, no woman convict has ever succeeded in escaping from San Quentin. In all probability it was just a private message to one of her old underworld friends. That girl is too intelligent to dream of formulating plans for escape. Why, she couldn't get out of the front gate. She'd have to swim the bay to escape, even if she succeeded in getting through the exit from the woman's quarters and past that suspicious guard in the little house there."

So Lanny made herself a highball and resolved to dismiss all thought of the incident. She also resolved to give Nance Belden a piece of her mind if and when she decided to visit her again. And she was not at all certain she would make Nance another visit.

Two weeks later, while she was sitting before the fire, reading, her telephone rang and a man's voice said:

"Is this Miss Rebecca Lanning?"

"Yes. Who is this?"

"Never mind. You wouldn't know me if I told you who I am. I'm a friend of Nance Belden's."

"Oh, indeed." Ironically. "And who might Nance Belden be?"

Lanny was nobody's fool. On the instant every sense was alert, for if this was a trap set by the authorities, who, in some mysterious way, had gotten wind of her escape, she was resolved not to walk into it.

"Are you going to be at home for an hour, Miss Lanning?" the voice pursued. It was a pleasant enough voice, Lanny reflected.

"I am, but what business is that of yours?"

"Oh, well, if you're going to be such a cutup," the voice rejoined, "I'll not bother to argue with you over the phone. I'll come out. Good-by."

He hung up, leaving Lanny in a state of acute mental perturbation, which did not subside until she heard her doorbell ringing some ten minutes later. It subsided then. Her courage always mounted when there was an immediate situation to face. "Nance Belden's friend," she decided instantly.

Memories of Youthful Years

Our memories of youthful years are distorted by all sorts of glamor.

Fur and Game Production as Business Proposition

A business that pays a 98 per cent dividend is the American fur and game industry. The bureau of biological survey estimates the annual returns from game and fur resources total probably not less than $2,000,000,000, and the amount expended in the protection and increase of fur, fish and game does not exceed 2 per cent of the yearly profits.

Fur and game production is a feasible and practical side line to forest and land conservation, and its increase under control is in no way detrimental to timber production, flood control, water conservation or the prevention of soil erosion, it is declared.

Game management on a timber area may bring profits long before any income from the timber can be realized, it is pointed out. These profits will help to carry the expenses of public or individually owned forests.

In keeping with the policy of the biological survey and other co-operating government agencies in the conservation program, the bureau advises landowners to plant or salvage nut and food-bearing trees and shrubs and to intersperse cover growths and den trees.

Enmity Forgotten

One of the most remarkable Christmas trees was put on view in London last year, a the Scots Guard exhibition.

It was made by a German soldier and presented by him to a Scots Guard with whom he exchanged greetings in the No Man's land between the trenches on Christmas day, 1915.

OPINION OF OLD TIMER IS "BOYS CAN'T TAKE IT"

Says They Are Getting Soft And Would Rather Sit Around Hot Stove

The following article is from the pen of Pat O'Connor in a recent issue of the Alaska Weekly:

The Old Timer dropped the paper that he had been reading when I came into the office, and as he tamped a load of tobacco into the bowl of his well colored brier, remarked—

"Some how or a other, the boys don't seem to be able to take it no more. The least little thing gets 'em down and it ain't none at all like it used to be. You know it's like the time I come over the Dyea trail and dropped into Juneau to spend the winter. I'd been over on the Yukon for a couple of years and sort of worked up a hankering to get a eyeful of the night life and the bright ligths of the City, and when I see Juneau that time, I knew I'd come fur enough. They sure had made a up-to-date Camp out of that place, and I couldn't figger the sense of going farther when I could see all the evidences and refinements of civilization right where I was.

"I got me a room where they had a good wood stove on the first floor that heated the place up, and then I goes over to the trading post and acquires some boots and a shirt or two, and when I gets my mane roached, and locates a restaraw that features Outside potatoes with good deer ment and smoked salmon, I know I'm sitting pretty for the winter.

"That evening I look the Camp over and connect with a lad I used to know that's making a drop of hooch over in the basin, and I locate a solo game that I admire purely as a speculative venture and figger than I'm going to like the Camp a lot. I'm packing a pretty heavy poke from the Forty mile, and I'm looking forward to a winter with no more worries an cares than a Swede with a pound of snoos and a quart of alky.

"That night, I wander into one of them social affairs like used to be popular and I see a lot of good looking gals, some white and some running pretty well to a Colodado Maduro shade and they was dancing a lot free and easy with the boys and siding up to the bar for their 40 drops after every passear.

"They was a little Chilkat Klooch there, as pretty as a spotted calf, and I see a couple of good looking lads is keeping her on the floor most of the time. I could see that they was a long ways from being pals too, an I figgered that maybe the little chocolate drop was the cause of the strained feeling. Then they was a row—I hear a lot of loud words, and see the two glaring at each other like a couple of grizzly cubs. One lad steps in and shoots a straight right to the jaw and knocks the other one slaunch wise across the room, and I go to the deck, figgering naturally that some one starts burning powder immediate. Well, nothing happens, the feller that takes the punch runs for the door and hollers "bull," and nobody don't say a word.

"Well, I sure was a lot surprised, cause I can see he's heeled, and he looks like he's a gent that can take care of hissef in most any company, but when he lets out that yell for pertection, I'm off of him, and when the crowd stand for the play and look on his actions as being natural, I almost lose faith in that camp right there—I figger she's going soft, and that's what I think is the matter of Alaskans today."

"Just who, do you figure is getting soft in Alaska?" I ask.

D'je read that?" he asked as he pointed with his pipe to an article in the paper he had just laid down. I looked and saw the account of Carl Whitham's accident over at the Nabesna Mine and of his having been flown into the Hospital at Fairbanks.

"Lucky thing they could get a plane," I ventured.

"Say listen Son," the Old Timer snorted. "When I first know that lad Whitham, he never needed a plane to pack him no place. An a few broken bones—say, in the old days he'd never paid them no attention at all. Why I remember one time he was coming over a glacier down Chisana way. It was maybe twenty year ago, and he's thinking about taking in a potlatch down at Tetlin and gets careless and tromps through a snow bridge over a crevice in the glacier and drops down on a ice shelf about 40 feet deep. He lands on his feet all right, but he snaps off a couple of bones in his right wrist which sort of handicaps him in a way. You see he's in a little crack about three to four feet feet wide, and on a shelf and if he slips he's liable to go right through to China or anyway to a cold storage plant that would be permanent, and besides his busted wrist, he's got a sprained ankle that's beginning to swell.

"Well, he ain't none discouraged so he starts chipping out steps on both walls and hitching hissef up like a coon going to war, and on account of only having one hand that would hold a knife and the bad ankle, he ain't what you would call making fast time but he's headed up.

"Well, he gets almost to the top when the crack gets a bit wider and he can't reach so he has to work his way back and start all over again, and finally after three days and nights of this he gets to the top, and by using the elbow on his crippled side, he h'ists hissef out on the snow.

"Now his string of pups has got tired of waiting for him to show up and they've gone on, so he starts to head for camp. Naturally he's a lot slowed down on account of his ankle that's swelling up a lot, but he keeps under way and finally comes into camp, and the boys get busy and straighten out his wrist and look after him generally, putting sheep grease on a few spots where he is froze up, and come Spring, he's the hit of the Potlatch over at Tetlin Lake, and I never hear him speak of his little accident except it kind of slows him down a bit on that corner dancing he was always so fond of."

"What is this all leading up to?" I asked.

"Well, read that story and you'll see that Alaskans are getting soft. Now this lad Whitham only breaks a few bones in his leg and jams his knee up and cracks his haid a little bit and he has to go an get a plane and go to a hospital, when in the old days he'd just wait till he got his breath and then he'd rustle a pair of snow shoes and go on in under his own steam.

"No Sir, I could see that the country was getting soft right there that time in Juneau when the lad calls for a cop, instead of settling his own troubles, and now I'm sure of it."

FEDERAL CENSUS OF CALIFORNIA KIDDIES

California parents to whom children were born, during the year 1934, are going to have special attention paid them by federal census officials, who are now conducting a state-wide "Register Your Baby" campaign, it has been announced.

The object of this campaign is to test the efficiency of the present state birth registration law and also to bring home to parents the tremendous importance of proper registration of their children's time and place of birth.

A single card, seeking simple data on all 1934 California babies, has been delivered to every one of the more than a million and a half in the state. Additional cards can be had from the local postoffice in each town or city or from each county emergency relief headquarters.

When these cards are filled out they are to be dropped into mail boxes and will be sent, postage free, to the census bureau headquarters in Washington. They will then be returned to Sacramento to be checked against the official records of the state. This absolutely assures proper birth registration.

Keep To The Right

Keep to the right of the road, urges the public safety department of the National Automobile Club. It is surprising how many "sloppy" drivers insist on driving in the center lanes of a four-lane road. It is possible that they do not understand that the center lanes are to be used only when passing other cars.

The slow driver in the inside lanes of a wide pavement is as great a menace as an actual obstruction in the road. Not only does he irritate every other driver, but he is responsible for all sorts of miner infractions of the law by motorists behind him.

In the interests of public safety, slow-moving vehicles must keep to the right. Four lane highways were built to promote safe traffic. They can accomplish their purpose only if drivers observe the rules of the road.

SOME QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Some Little Known Matters That Should Prove of General Interest

(By Maude Larue Ives)

Question: What book was sold for $106,000, probably the highest price for a book?

Answer: What is known as the Melk copy of the famous Gutenberg Bible, the first book ever printed from movable type. It was sold in 1926 to Dr. A. S. W. Rosenbach, a physician of New York.

Question: From what is the costly cashmere or kashmir, shawls made?

Answer: From the fine silky fleece of the cashmere goat. A full grown animal yields only eight ounces of the valuable down, which underlies the long hair. To make a shawl a yard and a half square, the fleece of ten goats is required.

Question: From what is belladona made, what are its uses and from what is name derived?

Answer: From the Deadly Nightshade or potato family. The plant is native to Europe and Asia, and is cultivated as a garden ornamental, as well as for medicinal purposes. All parts contain a poisonous alkaloid, from which the valuable drug belladona is made. The latter is widely used for the reilef of asthma, bronchitis, whooping cough and colic and other intestinal troubles; plasters or liniments made from belladona are applied externally to sooth the pains of inflamation and neuralgia. It is also valued highly by oculists.

The plant grows to a height of from two to six feet and bears drooping bell shaped purple flowers; it has broad oval leaves and large black berries.

Some years ago Italian ladies used the juice of belladona as a face ointment, and from this custom, as well as from its use in beautifying the eye, came its name, which is the Italian for fair lady.

Question: How did Florida receive its name?

Answer: The Spaniards landed on its shores on Easter Sunday, which in the Spanish language is "Pascua florida" (flowery Easter), and hence Florida received that name.

Question: Of what use is dust in the atmosphere?

Answer: Of the variable constituents of the atmosphere, water vapor and dust, stangely enough, are closely dependent upon each other. When the temperature of the atmosphere falls to the dew point— that is, the temperature at which water vapor changes to a liquid form—the condensation takes place very gradually. The dust particles cool more rapidly than the gaseous parts of the air, and each particle become the nucleus of a droplet of mist. The masses of mist form a cloud, from the lower surfaces of which the mist gathers into rain drops. Were it not for this beneficent provision of nature, almost every rainstorm would be a fierce deluge of downpouring water out of a cloudless sky. There would be no gentle summer showers; and if there were clouds they would be of a form and composition now unknown. A knowledge of the dust content of the atmosphere is quite as important as that of the water vapor content, for, in a way, it has quite as much to do with the distribution of rain. Atmospheric dust is the parent of cloud, just as cloud is parent of rain.

Removing Upholstery

It requires a delicate touch to remove the upholstering on the car doors or interior body panels and the motorist who distrusts his ability to do the job rightly should deputize it to a mechanic of unquestioned skill, according to the director of roadside service of the National Automobile Club.

Check Stop Light

Take the precaution to check the electric stop light on the car before starting a trip, suggests the emergency road service of the California State Automobile Association.

"WEAVING" IN AND OUT IS DANGEROUS

Weaving in and out of traffic is a dangerous practiee, not only to the driver doing it but also to other drivers on the highway, states the public safety department of the National Automobile Club.
and everything to be lost. The amount of time saved in twenty miles mount of time saved in twenty miles of driving in this hazardous manner is almost negligible and certainly is not worth the risk.

For every yard of headway made by the "weaving" driver, scores af other drivers are thrown into confusion and the orderly progress of traffic is disturbed and delayed. Moving the greatest number of vehicles on a highway at the highest safe speed requires order.

The weaving driver is a menace, both to himself and to others.

Stay in line—be orderly—respect the rights of others.

COLUMN OF N. R. A. FACTS

INFORMATION regarding the N. R. A. will be furnished each week by W. H. CLAY, Chairman of the local N. R. A. Publicity Committee.

New Year's business started with a bang. The New York Times index of business activity for the week ended Jan. 5 reached 87.1. This was about four points higher than the record made by the last week of the old year and nearly nine higher than the record of the first week of 1934.

Encouraging reports continue to come in from the business comparisions of 1934 over 1933. The banks in the Federal Reserve system earned $6,510,000 in 1934, while they lost $917,000 in 1933. The New York Life Insurance Company wrote $60,000,000 more new business in 1934. The Associated Bell System had a net gain of 298,000 telephone installations.

General Motors sold 927,493 cars and trucks compared with 755,778 in 1933. The department and dry goods stores made 14.7 per cent more in dollar sales in 1934; the variety store sales ran 9½ per cent higher; electrical equipment sales, 21 per cent higher.

"Real" wages—based on purchasing power instead of dollars — increased seven per cent in the first 11 months of 1934 over the comparable period in 1933, according to the National Industrial Conference Board. Employment and pay rolls were at all times higher last year than in 1933.

Farmers shared the better times with urbanites. Standard Statistics Company estimates that farm income reached $8,056,000,000 in 1934. The Department of Agriculture expected it to be little more than $6,000,000,000. The farm income was $5,051,000,000 in 1933.

Bank clearings for the first full week of the new year in 22 leading cities of the United States amounted to $5,372,940,000 or 22.3 per cent higher than in the corresponding week of 1934. Taken by itself, New York City showed an increase of 20.3 per cent, while the other 21 cities jumped 26 per cent. The biggest gains for the week were made by Philadelphia, Pittsburgh, Chicago, Detroit, Cleveland and Cincinnati.

Only five national banks were still unlicensed on December 31, according to J. F. T. O'Connor, comptroller of the currency. When the bank holiday ended, there were 1417 banks with deposits of $1,971,690,000 without licenses. The deposits in the five unlicensed banks total only $6,622,000.

Automobile and farm machinery production, factory and mill erection, and railroad requirements are continuing to advance steel output. It has now recahed an average of 47.5 per cent of capacity, 72 per cent higher than at this time in 1934, according to the American Iron and Steel Institute.

The electric power output last week totaled 1,668,731,000 kilowatt hours, compared with 1,650,467,000 in the week before, according to the Edison Electric Institute.

The annual indexes of advertising prepared by Printers' Ink give 1934 a gain of about 16 per cent over 1933. Farm papers and radio had increases of 33 per cent each; magazines, 29 per cent; outdoor advertising, 12 per cent; newspapers, 10 per cent.

More than 10,000 additional employees have been added to the Ford Motor Car Co. payroll since December 29. This is the best employment increase in that company since 1929, and is due in part to the large step up in sales volume in the agricultural sections.

An increase of 72,953 freight car loadings for the week ended January 5 over the preceding week has been reported by the Association of American Railroads. The total of 498,073 carloads was a slight decrease under the corresponding week of last year.

HIGHLIGHTS OF THE WEEK

1934 Eagles Good in 1935: The NIRB has announced that Blue Eagles for particular trades and industries marked "1934," as well as those originally issued under the President's Re-employment Agreement, may be used in 1935.

Destitutions Averaging $75,000 Weekly: Through the efforts of the 54 field officers of the Compliance Division, workers are now enjoying back-wage restitution at the rate of $75,000 a week. Since June 16, 1934, the total sum won for workers by the field officers is $1,468,000.

Stay Ordered on Scrip Provisions: Provisions of various retail codes which prohibit the acceptance of "scrip" in payment for goods have been stayed for thirty days, to and including February 6, 1935, under an order announced by the NIRB. The codes affected are those for the retail trade, the retail jewelry trade and retail food and gricery trade, totogether with "and other code or codes" in which similar provisions may exist.

One Code Assessment For Retail Trade: The NIRB has approved an order under which a firm engaged in retail trade will be required to pay only one assessmert for code administration regardless of the number of retail codes which affect portions of its business. However, it will be required to pay that assessment on a basis to cover its entire retail business, no matter how many lines it includes, and other than retail business will not be affected. The action indicates similar simplification throughout the code structure as soon as equitable means for working it out are perfected.

Cotton Garment Code Authority: The NRA has reconstituted the Code Authority of the Cotton Garment Manufacturing Industry. The membership was removed by executive order on December 6, last. Most of the old members are re-instated. The cause for dropping the others is that they have interests which conflict with their duties as code authority members.

Advertising Allowances: The NIRB has announced a new policy regarding advertising allowances under the codes. Advertising, it holds, should be paid for directly and not under the guise of price reductions, discounts, bonuses or rebates.

Specific Labeling Proposed: The Industrial Advisory Board, which has investigated the results of 16 years of grade labeling in Canada, reports that only one housewife out of eight buys on the strength of them, and only two out of eight knows that cans are labeled. It proposes that American canners use description instead of such symbols as "A," "B," and "C," or the words "fancy," "choice" and "standard."

Employment Provision Hearings Begin January 30: The NIRB announce that a public hearing will be held in Washington, January 30, on the subject of employment provisions in codes. This is the second of a series of open hearings to collect evidence of the operations of major code provisions. The first hearing convened in Washington on January 9. It dealt with the subject of price control and price fixing.

Varied Views on Price Control: More than 300 persons, representing many lines of industry and trade, expressed their views orally, or filed briefs ,for and against price control and price fixing at the open hearings conducted by the NIRB. On the first day of the hearing, held in the auditorium of the Commerce building, it was not possible to seat all of the persons in attendance.

Emergency in Cigarette Trade Extended: The NIRB has extended to January 26 inclusive, orders recognizing an emergency due to destructive price cutting in the wholesale and retail cigarette trade and fixing minimum markups. The extension was granted in order to provide additional time for review of a survey by the NRA Research and Planning Division of conditions in the cigarette trade.

LESSON SERMON OF CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

"Beloved, if God so loved us, we ought also to love one another." These words from I John comprise the Golden Text to be used Sunday, February 3, in all Chuches of Christ, Scientist, branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Bosotn, Mass.

The subject of the Lesson-Sermon will be "Love". Included among the Scriptual selections will be: "Ho, every one that thirteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, buy, and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money and without price . . . Incline your ear, and come unto me: hear, and your soul shall live; and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David" (Isaiah 55:1, 3).

The following passages from the Christain Science textbook, Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy, will also be included: "Love is impartial and universal in its adaption and bestowals . . . All nature teaches God's love to man, but man cannot love God supremely and set his whole affections on spiritual things, while loving the material or trusting in it more than in the spiritual" (pp. 13, 326).

HAPPENINGS HERE ELEVEN YEARS AGO

Some Items Gleaned From Copies Of The Record Of a Decade Past

While towing in a burned automobile from the Coastside early Thursday morning, C. J. Pettigrew came across another machine on fire on the Skyline boulevard, and went back after the second car, which proved to be a Buick.

Little Florence Stockton visited friends in the Crocker tract on Sunday.

The next meeting of the Daly City Merchants' Association will be held on Wednesday next at the Daly City Hall.

Sheriff T. C. McGovern was a visitor at the Record office on Wednesday.

Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Hoadley and son of San Francisco were weekend guests of their brother, Mr. F. W. Hoadley of Crocker avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Stotts and children of Crocker tract spent the day, last Sunday, with relatives in Oakland.

Mrs. H. B. McKee has been on the sick list, suffering from a slight attack of tonsilitis.

Friends of Miss Elsie Forsell of Los Olivos avenue are glad to see she is out again, following a severe siege of tonsilitis which confined her to her home for over a week.

Mr. and Mrs. D. Saylor and Miss Ruby Saylor of the Richmond district spent the day, Wednesday, visiting Mrs. George Augustien in Crocker tract.

Crocker-Pershing P. T. A. held a candy sale on Thursday which was a financial success, though not enough candy was received to supply the demands of the children.

The "Be Prepared" Club met at the home of Aloysius Brady in the Crocker tract last Wednesday evening. After the business meeting, a social time was enjoyed. Several outside visitors were entertained.

FIRST OXEN BORN IN ALASKA IN YEARS ARE SCHEDULED

The first musk oxen born in Alaska in a century were reported recently in the annual report of J. N. Darling, chief of the biological survey. The blessed event occurred in the herd which the bureau introduced in Alaska after 1930.

"The calves were subject to attack by the older animals, particularly the bulls," the report said, "and the last calf born, weighing 17 pounds, died of injuries thus received."

Mr. Darling, who is a noted cartoonist over his signature of "Ding," was appointed chief of the bureau on March 10, succeeding Paul G. Redington. His report covered the fiscal year ending June 30.

"During the shedding period, 24 pounds of musk ox wool were collected and turned over to the extension service of the College of Agriculture and School of Mines," the report said, "for weaving experiments, and many scarfs that sold for $10 each were woven by girl students."

The bureau also persuaded the Farm Credit Administration that silver foxes are eligible security for loans, the report brought out. The action, "even though it came rather late in the season, was encouraging news to fox farmers, many of whom had faced difficulty in carrying animals through the winter and in financing the production of next season's crop of pelts."

SEE NUMEROUS IMPROVEMENTS IN NEW MODELS

Some Betterments Pointed Out In Construction And Lines Of 1935 Cars

Among the striking features of the new Ford V-8 for 1935 displayed before many thousands of motorists at the San Francisco auto show, is the body design, according to A. J. Bertini, of the National Auto Co., Colma.

The new model is a definite departure from any previous Ford creation, he claims. It is pointed to as evidence of progress in Ford engineering.

Numerous improvements in chassis design increase ease of control, and two important improvements have been made in the Ford- V-8 engine, of which there are now 1,300,000 in service.

In all body types safety glass is standard equipment all around, and at no extra cost.

Ford has developed a new type of body for 1935—touring sedan. This car has sleek lines and embodies a trim rear trunk compartment, integral with the body.

In appearance, all the new Fords are characterized by a freshness of conception, utilizing flowing curves to carry out the modern motif. This, plus a new treatment of interior and appointments, sound an entirely new note in Ford body design, the local Ford dealer says.

The new Ford embodies engineering developments that have increased riding comfort by providing what Ford engineers describe as "counter poise" ride. By moving the compact V-8 engine forward ,it has been possible to move the seats forward a corresponding distance. This brings the seats between the axles and provides a front seat ride for the backseat passengers.

Bodies are materially wider, and wheels are smaller, but tires are larger. This contributes further to the easy riding qualities of the car.

Other improvements that are adding to the popularity of the new Ford include newly designed internal expanding mechanical type brakes, which give more effective breaking control with less pedal pressure, and additional drum ribs, which give 40 per cent increase in cooling effect.

INVITATION TO CALL AT NEW LOCATION

The office of Superintendent of Banks is now nicely located at 343 Sansome street, San Francisco. Across the street is the Federal Reserve Bank and close at hand are most of the banking and financial institutions of this city.

A saving in rent of $2000 a year is made by the change and 600 square feet more space are available. The office occupies the whole fourth floor, with light on four sides.

The old furniture, much of which is more than 20 years old, has been touched up; the tops have been removed from the old fashioned roller-top desks; and the antiquated tin boxes for filing have been sold (to a deluded man) and documents placed in standard filing cases. These changes have been made at a very small cost.

The new office is wide open so that taxpayers on entering may see at a glance what service they are getting for their money.

William J. Murphy, the new chief deputy, is also bond examiner. He is serving for one salary, thus saving the state $4300 a year. Considerable saving is being made in traveling expenses.

NAZARENE WORK GROWS STEADILY

(By J. M. Gill, Pastor)

The Nazarene work is really growing like it hasn't since the organization began in Daly City. Last Sunday 205 were present in Sunday School and a goodly number attended the morning worship service.

There have been many improvements made inside and outside the building. No doubt you have noticed the changes outside. Well, why not attend and be benefited by what it has to offer on the inside.

If you are in need of spiritual help, are friendless or don't know which way to turn, come to the "Friendly Church," which is interested in your spirit, soul and body.

Damaging Lubricant

Damage done by lubricant is something that rarely receives attention from the car owner, according to the director of rodaside service of the National Automobile Club.

However, it takes several forms. One of the commonest is that which results in the destruction of insulation on various units of the electrical system which are in close proximity to regularly lubricated parts. The insulation should be cleaned of all grease and oil regularly.

Driver's First Duty

There are a number of inescapable duties which every driver owes his car but clamoring for a leading, if not actually the first, place among them is that of checking the oil gauge, states the director of roadside service of the National Automobile Club. The careful driver will notice its performance instantly the engine is started. Thereafter, he will keep a weather eye upon what it is recording until the engine is stopped again.

Spark Plug Tests

A spark plug may show a fairly good spark when tested out of the cylinder and yet not have enough strength when it is in the cylinder and under pressure, according to the emergency road service of the California State Automobile Association.

The reason is that air offers less resistance than does gas under pressure. Unless a spark plug is particularly strong when tested in the open air it should be discarded.

Doctors Know!

. . . and they use liquid laxatives

You'd use a liquid, too, if you knew how much better it makes you feel.

A liquid laxative can always be taken in the right amount. You can gradually reduce the dose. Reduced dosage is the secret of real and safe relief from constipation.

Just ask your own doctor about this. Ask your druggist how popular liquid laxatives have become. The right liquid laxative gives the right kind of help—and the right amount of help. When the dose is repeated, instead of more each time, you take less. Until the bowels are moving regularly and thoroughly without aid.

People who have experienced this comfort, never return to any form of help that can't be regulated! The liquid laxative generally used is Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. It contains senna and cascara, and these are natural laxatives that form no habit. It relieves a condition of biliousness or sluggishness without upset.

To relieve your occasional upsets safely and comfortably, try Syrup Pepsin. The druggist has it.

OLD AGE PENSION INFORMATION ENCLOSE STAMP JUDGE LEHMAN, HUMBOLDT, KANS.

CALIFORNIA News of the Week

"Terribly overcrowded," were the words used by Assemblyman Frank G. Marton, chairman of the assembly prisons and reformatories committee, to describe San Quentin Prison, after a visit to the penitentiary by the committee. The group has been invetigating conditions there following the recent prison break.

A damage suit of $500,000 and an injunction have been filed against placer gold mining methods in parts of Placer and Nevada counties by the Pacific Gas and Electric Company. Such hydraulic mining, the charge reads, is a public nuisance, filling streams with muck and silt. If the suit is won, a ban may be put on all hydraulic operations.

The Reconstruction Finance Corporation in Washington has amended the terms of the new loan to the California Toll Bridge Authority, making a publicly-owned railroad across the San Francisco-Oakland Bay bridge a possibility. The clause which would make such a loan possible only to a private corporation, has been amended to include "responsible railway corporations, publicly or privately owned."

Although Thomas J. Mooney's petition to the Supreme Court of the United States for a rehearing of his case has been rejected, lawyers of California's most publicized prisoner held onto the thread of hope spun by the court when it declared that Mooney could apply for a writ of habeas corpus in California courts. Meanwhile it has been suggested in Sacramento Legislative circles that the prisoner's sentence be commuted.

If it were not for acorns gleaned from a rugged, unproductive section of Placer County, Indians of the Auburn reservations could not subsist through the winter, according to statements made by the Indians themselves. L. J. McKinney, probation officer of Placer County, has asked federal aid for the group, who, he claims, are undernourished and living on soil unfit for cultivation.

A regular air transport line linking California and the Orient is no longer a myth. A deal whereby the Pan-American air lines will rent the Alameda Airport for $17,000 a year has been consumated. Alameda will be the western port of the air voyage. Eight huge multi-motored "clipper" ships have been built for the run. It has been said that Col. Charles A. Lindbergh, Pan-American executive, will fly the path-finding ship from Alameda via the Pacific islands to China.

His Excellency A. A. Troyanovsky, soviet Russian ambassador to the United States, passed through California recently on his way from Moscow to Washington. When asked how the soviet government would feel about the United States deporting alien Communist agitators to Russia, he said it would not object provided the persons had soviet passports, but that it did not feel responsible for agitators from other countries.

Investigation of California building and loan activities by the senate investigating committee has revealed several irregularities in business, according to the committee findings. The committee opened its hearings January 22. with the Prudential Building and Loan Company under surveillance. A carpenter of Modesto testified that he had exchanged $4000 on deposit with the Prudential company for capital stock, being told that the stock was non-assessable. He later learned it was 100 per cent assessable. The Legislature has proposed a bill which would reorganize the associations.

Governor Frank Merriam has presented his long-awaited budget to the State Legislature, also broadcasting it over a state-wide hookup. The comprehensive document asks the Legislature to authorize an expenditure of 394 million dollars over a two-year period beginning July 1. It also proposes that California taxpayers contribute 154 millions in new taxes to help finance the general fund and unemployment relief. Chief bone of contention of his suggested tax increase is the sales tax, which he would jump to three per cent.

Although work relief for the average California family costs the government $14.70 a month more than direct relief, it is "infinitely superior to any other form of relief," according to Runo E. Arne, assistant SERA administrator, after a four-months' survey of the relative costs of work and direct relief. Over the four months period, the average California family on direct relief cost $22.33 per month, while the family on work relief cost $37.03. Yet every dollar spent on work relief, Arne pointed out, means a dollar's worth of labor is expended on public property, adding to the capital wealth of the nation.

A well-loved Californian, a man who spent 25 years in state politics, died the other day at Santa Monica. He was William I. Traeger, former representative in Congress and for 12 years sheriff of Los Angeles County. He died of an acute liver disorder.

A total of 850,000 persons have viewed the priceless rarities in the Huntington Library and Art Gallery at San Marino since the institution was opened in 1928. In 1934 121,000 visitors inspected the exhibits, 19,000 more than in 1933.

Lace, an Ideal Choice for the Matron

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

YES, the fashions paraded in style shows and pictured in newspapers and magazines are attractive enough, but they are only for slim and svelte young creatures, why don't they ever consider the needs of women who have reached forty and plus! It's a complaint, and only too often a just one, which those older are continually voicing.

Just to prove to mothers and matrons that they are not left out in the scheme of things, look what's here in the picture—two of the loveliest flattering lace gowns imaginable, for women of stately grace be they young or not so young. In spite of all the frenzied excitement over sumptuous gowns for the budding debutante, when it comes to beautiful appearance, smoothly groomed self-confident and slim-of-silhouette, daughters better look to their laurels when it comes to competing with mothers and matrons in the art of dress these days.

The fact that lace is scheduled to play so important a part in fashions coming and here, is a good omen for matrons who appreciate the magic which flattering apparel yields in erasing the years, and as every woman knows, there is nothing more flattering, more exquisitely feminizing than beautiful lace. The stately matron to the left in the picture is wearing a lace gown of high distinction. It is particularly ideal for the woman who has a limited wardrobe, for it is a rich black lace, which will give grand service the year round, winter and summer. With an eye to being practical, the designer has created a short matching jacket, making the gown as happily apropos for informal dining as for formal dancing.

The other gracious lace gown which is here pictured is charmingly tuned to a very youthful matron's dress-up needs. Bands of green moire at the back enliven it. This lovely dress is a Lucille Paray model.

Lace is also being worked into chiffon dresses very cleverly, the lace and the chiffon going fifty-fifty. A very winsome gown has a deep flounce of the lace with the same lace intricately set into the bodice and sleeves.

There are legions of novelty laces being shown in the advance displays. Most interesting are the laces which have cellophane and metal accents. Beaded laces and embroidered laces of every imaginable type are also among the showings.

Interesting news about laces includes the shirtwaist dresses which are being fashioned for resort wear and which will be good for summer wear later on. Midseason afternoon frocks in dark or bright crepes or light woolens are also trimmed with lace dyed a perfect match.

Tailored lace is also being smartly featured for afternoon wear. The laces are of a somewhat sturdy character and the ensemble idea is carried out in that there is always an accompanying jacket.

SMART SPORTWEAR

By CHERIE NICHOLAS

For fun and right smart jauntiness, look to the leather hiplength jacket. It is easy to slip into, comfy, free with action back, and inside it has a Johnny collar to keep out wintry blasts. The Scotch plaid skirt has as its predominating color, the same color of the jacket, as do the calfskin kiltie tongues that are excellent for walking. The beret adds yet another note of jauntiness.

A New Velvet

A new velvet with a pile of shiny cellophane on a silk back is recommended for making accessories, such as hats, bags, capes and evening jackets.

FASHIONS INSPIRED BY PEASANT THEMES

Peasant themes, with their lovely colorfulness and freshness, are inspiring the season's fashions. In virtually every branch of apparel there are innumerable details that bear the unmistakable imprint of peasant inspiration.

Materials, with the new fringed edges in rustic fabrics, the peasant print cottons in sports frocks, and the combinations of gay colors, like red and green, purple and pink, are distinct changes from the modern trends.

Bloused bodices and gathered skirts, belts embroidered in peasant colors and motifs, raffia, cord-tied details and heavy linen and cotton laces in accessories further establish the pre-eminence of this influence.

Trains Are Short for the Evening, Gowns Are Slit

Most likely your new evening frock will have a slit skirt to show an alluring few inches of silk-clad leg, but if it has a train, the train will be short. And it is quite likely that it may have a tunic and it may be trimmed with fur. All these points mark a lovely gown which is of dull rose taffeta with slanting shoulder straps of brown kolinsky that continue down the back to the waist. Delightful for the more mature woman is a tunic dress of plum colored Chantilly type lace with a long slim tunic and a trained skirt. There is a sash of plum-colored satin. Another tunic dress has a tunic that is pointed at the back to form an overtrim. It is of red sequins over a dull red crepe skirt.

Patou Uses Moderate Slit in His New Dress Designs

Patou has surpassed himself with the simplicity and elegance of his "little season" collection. He probably never before has designed such completely lovely things.

The lines which were felt to be a bit over-severe in his August collection have been modified into the most graceful of curves and angles, and the slits have become shorter for daytime and smartly moderate for evening.

Let Our Motto Be GOOD HEALTH

BY DR. LLOYD ARNOLD

Professor of Bacteriology and Preventive Medicine, University of Illinois, College of Medicine.

GRANDMOTHER'S COLD REMEDIES ARE BEST

If your head aches and your back aches and your legs ache, and you shake with a chill in a hot room, and your eyes are watery, your nose stopped up, and you keep sneezing and sneezing, you do not have to see a doctor for a diagnosis that you are beginning a head cold. You know from experience that's what you've got. There probably isn't a person in this country older than an infant who has not had at least a few colds on the debit side of his ledger. Colds are the most general disease we experience.

Now when you have a cold just starting, the most sensible thing is to stop it immediately, and the sooner you start the more successful you will be.

If you say to yourself, "I won't bother now, but I'll do something tonight," you may be in for a three-day siege, which is the normal run of a cold that gets a good headway, or you may be in for a longer siege that may end in bronchitis, sinusitis, pleurisy or pneumonia.

Medical science has been moderately successful in proving out ways for building up the body's resistance against colds, but thus far in the way of stopping a cold that has started, modern science has not been able to make any improvement upon grandmother's remedies. Grandmother knew that her remedies did the trick. All that modern science has been able to do has been to tell why the remedies were successful.

Now, what did grandmother do? She told you to get into your night clothes while she filled a pan with hot water. Then she set the pan on the floor with a chair beside it, and you sat on the chair with your feet in the water and a blanket around you until you were wet with perspiration. Then she tucked you into bed with several layers of warmed blankets over you. But before she tucked you close around the head, she gave you a glass of hot lemonade or of sweetened vinegar water. If your throat was sore, she put a warm flannel turpentine pack around your neck. Then she left you to sweat it out, and by morning, while you were still weak, the cold was gone, and by noon, if you bundled up well, you were able to go into the winter air, with little danger of the cold coming back.

Grandmother figured that these heroic measures were lots better—and lots less bother in the end—than having you hang around the house for days coughing your head off and perhaps getting worse, and besides the rest of the family wouldn't be in such danger of catching the cold from you.

Well, science says grandmother did the wisest thing possible. When you have a beginning cold, your skin is clammy and cold, and the blood is collected in the internal organs. The sweating forces the contracted skin vessels to dilate, the sweat glands secrete, and the blood becomes concentrated by the loss of water from the sweat glands. This causes water to be drawn from the body cells into the blood stream, and there is complete redistribution of fresh blood. Heating the skin of the feet is much better than applying heat to any other single body area since our feet are important thermal regulators of the body. The blanket prevents heat loss.

The hot lemon juice or the hot vinegar water helps get the digestive system in order, which was put out of order by first the chilling and then the heating of the body skin, with the consequence that the normal action of the stomach was upset and no acid could be secreted into it. The lemon juices give artificial acidity to the stomach and the heat in the "ade" causes a local increase in the blood supply to the stomach. Thus the digestive system becomes normal and active again without being loaded with food, and there is no danger of an accumulation of body acids.

Likewise the flannel cloth moistened with warm turpentine and wrapped around the neck is sound in its scientific principle. It is a form of counter irritation, which has been good therapy for centuries and centuries.

A day and a night of grandmother's kind of treatment will almost invariably stop a beginning cold.

It is estimated that the average person engaged in gainful industrial employment loses about two and one-half days per year from his work because of colds.

This causes a loss of millions of dollars in wages alone, and in addition there is the loss in energy and efficiency for many days following an attack, the loss from illness due to colds, and there is the cost of medicine and the medical and nursing services.

Colds are in their most infectious stage at their beginning. Perhaps some day we shall become so enlightened that employers will send employees home immediately at the first indication of a cold so that other employees won't be infected, and teachers will do the same with pupils the moment they start sniffling.

LEFTY SMITH ADDS DALY CITY PUNCH

(By Al Gould)

It is evident that the Daly City nine in general and Manager Martin in particular are pinning their hopes on Lefty Smith's mighty arm to put them on top in the Recreation "AA" League. Smith, the former ace of the strong Postoffice nine, on the mound for the first time since his retirement, convinced the fans he still possesses his shrewdness and ability.

The Printers were allowed only eight scattered hits, while seven went out by the fanning route.

Dinneen excelled at the bat, collecting three for three, one being a homer. Kondeff got two out of three and Jordanoff two for four, sharing honors with their stick work. Harry Maloney and Hughie Smith excelled in the field.

She leaves to mourn their loss: Albert Emhoff, a son, of Banta; Mrs. Pauline Sunderman, daughter; another son, William, passed away a few years before his mother's death; and the following grandchildren: Pauline and Henry Sanderman, Frank and Katherine Emhoff, Albert, Elvira and Marguerite Emhoff, besides a host of friends both in Daly City and San Francisco.

Mrs. Emhoff was a native of Baden, Germany, and was 77 years of age.

Lenses Remove Easily

Headlamp lenses may fit snugly, but the car owner shold bear in mind that they are designed to be removed effortlessly.

The screw that holds the rim of the lens should be opened to a point that permits the rim to be lifted outward and upward with the lightest of pulling, remarks the director of roadside service of the National Automobile Club. Violence results in a broken lens.

Spark Plug Gaps

Spark plug gaps should always be set according to the manufacturers instructions, advises the emergency road service of the California State Automobile Association.

When the engine misses while idling or at light loads the gaps are probably too close and should be set wider. Missing at high speed or under heavy load indicates that the gaps are probaly too wide.

IS ENDORSED BY FEDERAL HOUSING ADMINISTRATION

Building Convention And Exposition to Be Held Here Next May

Backed by the San Francisco Build-ers Exchange, one of the largest and strongest organizations of its kind in America, and carrying the unqualified endorsement of the Federal Housing Administration, the annual San Francisco Building Exposition and Convention, May 4 to 12 inclusive, promises to be one of the outstanding events of 1935.

The committee of the Builders Exchange under the chairmanship of President W. H. George has named Frederick Weddleton, widely known exposition engineer, manager of the event. Already Weddleton has built up an organization and established executive headquarters at 644 Mission street, where a flood of applications for space is being received daily.

"The exposition," said Mr. George, "is planned as the contribution of the building industry of San Francisco toward the success of the federal housing program and dovetails with the plans of the Federal Housing Administration to increase popular interest in this nation-wide movement toward a return to normalcy."

According to the plans of the Builders Exchange group the exposition will be in effect a revival of San Francisco's old Mechanics Fair, an annual event of tremendous popularity prior to the disaster of 1906.

However, it will be on a larger and and more comprehensive scale than its predecessor and will offer a complete cross section of the building industry with exhibits of every product and service of the trade.

Featured in connection with the exposition will be numerous conventions and meetings of organizations of architects, engineers, contractors, home owners, apartment house and hotel owners and managers, garden associations and other similar groups.

It is probable that during the exposition there will be a convention of the personnel of the Federal Housing Administration covering all the western states and it is a certainty that the Federal Housing Administration will be represented with an extensive exhibit.

MINING NOTES OF VARIOUS SECTIONS

Reports of satisfactory results being obtained from the Culross property located on Culross Island at the mouth of Port Wells continue to come into Valdez.

This property was well along in development work a number of years ago, but owing to the fact that the ore was of a base character, distance from smelter and other natural obstacles it was difficult to make more than a break even proposition of the mine and it was practically abandoned by the owners. These difficulties however have been largely overcome now, principally through the increased price of gold, coupled with the fact that arrangements have been made with the Alaska Steamship Company to have a steamer call at Port Wells from time to time, picking up ore and hauling it to the Tacoma smelter.

First month's recovery at Island Mountain Mines, Ltd., Cariboo operation of interests closely associated with Newmont, is officially reported at $24,000. The initial performance is regarded as highly satisfactory by the management, indicating that once the mill gets into its stride a considerably higher output may be expected. Unofficial reports from the Cariboo are to the effect that the company is already contemplating an increase in the size of the mill. While rated at 50 tons capacity the mill has been handling 65 tons.

Representative White of Idaho said he would ask Congress to help gold miners by liberalizing the securities act and providing for roads to undeveloped ore laden areas. He said he was drafting a bill to free persons financing mining projects from what he termed unreasonably stringent regulations on the flotation of mining securities as compared with other industries. In virgin mining regions, the Idahoan said, development often is held up because the mine sites are within national forest boundaries with no roads to facilitate moving in machinery and other supplies.

Two hundred eleven days of operation and more than $250,000.00 in gold dust is the record hung up for the season by the Bear Creek Dredging outfit when they were forced to close down for the season recently.

According to Martin E. Olson of Dillingham the Alaska Road Commission is to be heartily congratulated upon the fine work it has done on the road between Dillingham and Kanakanak which has just been completed. The men responsible for the splendid work done are Engineers Edmonds and Nyberg, who have returned to Anchorage. Through their discovery of a gravel pit near the route the Federal Government was saved the cost of hauling gravel from the beach thus cutting down construction costs. The road is perfectly graveled and everyone in the section is delighted to have an eight mile road which is usuable, and very necessary.

Anyone with a bent for hunting or collecting minerals may obtain a free simple aid to the identification of those to be found. Such a guide has been compiled by J. H. Batcheller, secretary of the Oregon State Mineral board and professor of mining engineering at Oregon State College.

Royce Catcher Collects Five For Five; Gerstenberg Fans Eleven Batters

(By "Moe" Plansky)

The Royce tossers went on a batting rampage and swamped the Mission Reds by the lopsided score of 19 runs to 7, amassing a total of 23 bingles, at the Club House diamond, Saturday afternoon.

Douner, the Mission Red twirler, was no puzzle to the Royce sluggers and they fattened their batting averages at the expense of his offerings.

Creighton Davies twirled the first inning, and showed that he can still propel the spheroid with success far above the average chucker by whiffing three of the four batsmen who faced him.

Gerstenberg relieved Davies in the second inning and breezed along in easy fashion. He allowed his opponents eight scratch hits, and sent 11 hitters to the bench via the strikeout route.

The Royce team will play the fast Sunset Federals this coming Saturday at the Seals Stadium at 12:30.

Admission to these games is absolutely free, and everyone is welcome to attend.

The battery for this game will be Davies, pitcher, and Bevlacqua, as catcher.

FAVOR VOTE ON COUNTY CHARTER BY ELECTORATE

He requested that there be no smoking during the meeting, stating that the smoke filled room last week had contributed to his illness.

A request was read from the State Supervisorial Association that the San Mateo County board express itself on Governor Merriam's proposal that the state highway department take over all county roads.

Strong opposition to the plan was voiced by several members of the board. During the ensuing discussion Supervisor A. J. Witt of Daly City declared:

"From my past experience with the state highway commission, I would say that if we have to go to Sacramento for our roads we are going to have a serious situation." He cited the Alpine and Coast road projects as examples of what the state had failed to do with roads it has already taken into its secondary system.

Similar sentiments were expressed by other board members.

Witt moved the board go on record as definitely opposed to transferring the county roads to the state. The motion was seconded by Poole. The vote was unanimously favorable to the motion.

All applicants for county fire warden, including the incumbent, were referred to the new advisory county fire commission for consideration and recommendation.

The county executive's new recreation commission was held up two weeks at the request of Supervisor Witt, who contended the old commission had done excellent work.

County Executive Kellogg asked to be allowed to withdraw his nomination of Dr. Sweeney as director of health and welfare, explaining that the new health board wanted to consider all those who have applied for the position, including Dr. Harper Peddicord, director before the governmental shakeup early this month. The request was concurred in by the board.

Miss Clara B. Dills of Burlingame was reappointed county librarian.

On suggestion of District Attorney Ferrell the board voted that all business to be transacted at board meetings must be in the hands of the county clerk not later than the preceding Thursday.

SOME ACTIVITIES OF GIRL RESERVES

The Daly City Girls Reserve held their regular meeting Monday evening at the home of their president, Miss Margaret Ray of Flournoy street.

Plans were completed for the first whist party, to be held Friday evening at the home of Misses Mildred and Frances Wolf of 289 Los Banos avenue. Many lovely prizes will be awarded and coffee and cake will be served following the game.

The girls are trying to raise money to finance their annual summer camp at Big Basin.

A candy sale was held last Saturday, and proved to be a very successful affair.

The boys will be at it again Sunday at the Seals Stadium. Meaning, of course, the San Francisco major leaguers headed by Joe Cronin and the East Bay big leaguers piloted by Dick Bartell. With many millions of dollars of baseball talent, such as "Lefty" O'Doul, "Chick" Hafey, Tony Lazzeri, Johnny Vergez, Frankie Crosetti, Freddy Muller, Harlan Pool, Gussie Suhr, Harry Lavagetto, Ralph Kress, Dolph Camilli, Johnny Babich Augie Galan, Ernie Lombardi, Marvin Owen, "Count" Puccinelli, Roy Johnson, "Babe" Dahlgren, Gordon Slade, Eddie Montague and others, the game should be a humdinger.

If you have forgotten—they are playing at the James J. Nealon Benefit games next Sunday afternoon February 3, at the Seals Stadium. All proceeds go to care for injured amateur and semi-pro players.

The first game will be between the Virden Campfires and the Rough Rider Cords at 10 a. m. MERRY WIDOW WILL PROVE BIG SCREEN TREAT

Gay Tale Unfolded Against Lavish Backgrounds And Good Music

Resplendent in its strikingly beautiful settings and costumes, filled to the brim with sly, ingratiating humor, telling a romantic tale that cannot fail to delight every onlooker, and echoing the never-to-be-forgotten melodies of Franz Lehar, "The Merry Widow" opens at the Daly City Theater Sunday and Monday, February 3 and 4, as one of the most glorious filmtreats ever offered by the Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studios.

With a cast that could not be improved upon and the superb direction of Ernst Lubitsch this picture floats along like a bubble of merriment to tell its story of the debonair prince and the bewitching widow whom he waltzes away to romance amid the nocturnal delights of gay Vienna and Paris.

Maurice Chevalier and Jeanette MacDonald have never enjoyed a greater triumph. They sing the Lehar songs as they have never been sung before, backgrounded by a magnificent symphony orchestra. Una Merkel and George Barbier help in the humorous scenes and the eye-filling dances and Albertina Rasch ballets are a joy to behold. "The Merry Widow" is the grandest thing to come out of Hollywood in a long, long time.

MARCHBANK ASKS PERMIT TO BUILD SOUTHERN TRACK

of the locations are within a short distance of the heart of Los Angeles. The experience at Tanforan, at Hawthorne, in Chicago, and other courses shows the advisability of having a track easily accessible to the inhabitants of a metropolis.

Organizers of the new jockey club are cognizant of the history of the famed Washington Park plant at Chicago, where the American Derby, frequently won by California bred runners, was run, and an attempt will be made to make the new association as sportsmanlike as was the Washington Park of old. It is promised there will not be the least taint of the promotional in the Southern California Blood Horse Association in all the years it plans to furnish the best of racing.

It will be a people's track essentially, Marchbank promises. With the spirit of sport ruling in all things, it is expected the course will soon become one of the most popular plants in the country. As an English duke said some time back, all men are equal on the turf and under it. With sportsmanship as its slogan, fans look forward to the new track achieving a high reputation in its first period of the great sport.
